

White sea bream (Diplodus sargus) and diver in shallow water at Puerto del Carmen, Lanzarote, by Barry Kaye, 2013

Wednesday 8th November 2023 at 19:30:

Light & Colour Underwater

by Barry Kaye (Lancashire MCS)

On television the seas are blue and the corals teem with colourful fish, but the waters around the UK are usually dark and green... How does the sea look to the animals that make it their home? Colour plays a part in hiding from predators to attracting a mate, and many sea creatures perception and use of light is very different ways to our own.

@ Lancaster Maritime Museum

£4 donation requested to Lancashire MCS

Everybody Welcome

For more information/updates, please see our website:
lancashiremcs.org.uk

