

Above: The remains of the Imperatriz, wrecked in 1866, photo by Nigel Neil.

The ‘Imperatriz’ - a Portuguese shipwreck on the River Lune, and some other local maritime archaeology.

By Nigel Neil

(Lancaster and District Heritage Group and Neil Archaeological Services)

Wednesday 14th May 19:30

The Imperatriz was carrying corn from Mazagan in Morocco to Lancaster when she ran aground just yards from her destination in 1866. Today her remains, when revealed by the shifting river sands, are a reminder of when Lancaster was a thriving international port city.

@ Lancaster Maritime Museum

£4 donation to Lancashire MCS requested

Everybody Welcome

For more information/updates, please see our website:

lancashiremcs.org.uk

